Reginans are taking beauty pageants by storm, as another local woman has been crowned Miss World Canada for a second consecutive year.

Annora Bourgeault, 21, was chosen on Sunday in Surrey, B.C., to represent Canada at the Miss World beauty pageant in London this November. Bourgeault's win comes a year after fellow Reginan Camille Munro took home the crown.

"I'm extremely overwhelmed at the moment,"

Bourgeault told Metro from Vancouver on Monday.

"The win just goes to show that we have some quality and passionate women living in Regina."

Bourgeault, a third-year psychology student at the University of Regina, made her Miss World Canada preparations while balancing a full-time school schedule, two part-time jobs and fundraising for the Variety charity.

Like Bourgeault, Munro attended the U of R.

"I've always been impressed by the young people in Regina in terms of ability and talent ... so having two women, who also happen to be U of R students, as winners comes as no surprise," said Camero Louis, U of R's associate dean of the undergraduate faculty of arts.

Bourgeault will arrive back in Regina on Wednesday, and plans to begin working on projects dealing with multiculturalism.

"I plan on advocating for students to go on international travel exchanges, since it's a really enriching experience that everyone should have," said Bourgeault, who was once an exchange student in north-east England.

Born and raised in Regina, Bourgeault works as an international student aid volunteer and helps to welcome students to Canada. She plans to become a psychologist, and spends her spare time playing the guitar and violin, as well as singing and writing songs.

"I'm extremely proud," said Janice Bourgeault, Annora's mother.

"Annora's a very humble person with very good morals, and I'm happy to share her with Canada."

Annora Bourgeault of Regina is all smiles after being crowned this year's Miss World Canada on Sunday in Surrey, B.C. The 21-year-old will represent the country in the Miss World pageant in London in November. Inset, Regina's Camille Munro was named Miss World Canada last year.

Ukrainian ambassador urges Canada to reject referendums

Visit to Saskatchewan.

Separatist votes may be used as pretext for further action, he fears

MORGAN MODJESKI
Metro in Saskatoon

Ukraine's ambassador to Canada is calling two referendums held by pro-Russian separatists in the eastern region of the country "a joke."

Vadym Prystaiko, who was appointed ambassador in 2012, was in Saskatoon on Monday as part of a trip to strengthen ties between Saskatchewan and Ukraine.

Speaking to media at the Park Town Hotel, he said the recent votes were illegitimate and that world leaders must reject their results.

"It can't be recognized by anybody. It's sort of a joke," Prystaiko said.

"The ballots they were using were just a simple piece of paper. By not having the protected piece of paper, you can vote as many times as you like."

He explained that under Ukrainian law, the regional referendums are not recognized. But he noted that the votes could serve as a "pretext for further action" in the region.

"That's what's bothering us," he stressed. "That's what's a threat to the society — to the state itself."

The referendums, which were held in the regions of Donetsk and Luhansk on Sunday, have been called illegitimate by the western world, including Canadian Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird.

Many countries, Canada included, fear that the votes might undermine Ukraine's national election scheduled for May 25.

In a statement on Sunday, Baird said Canada would be there to support the people of Ukraine as they chart a "new course in their history."

"These votes are a farce and constitute another attempt by pro-Russian separatists to incite violence and further divide the country," Baird said in the statement.

"The only legitimate vote will be on May 25, 2014, when real democratic action will be at play."

Business owner seeks to divert bypass route

A Regina businessman is asking the province to scrap its selected route for the south-east section of the planned Regina Bypass over concerns that the highway will intersect future commercial developments and add to the city's congestion.

Nestor Mryglod, owner of Super Seamless of Canada, wants the province to move the terminus of the highway from its planned location about 400 metres east of Tower Road.

"If the proposed intersections are utilized, the route will not 'bypass' Regina at all," Mryglod told Metro by email.

"It will deliver the commuters, truckers and tourists alike to (planned) retail areas well within the city limits ...

(such as the) planned Aurora Shopping District."

The prospective route, Mryglod adds, will also hamper his plans to build two manufacturing plants on a lot he has purchased in the area.

He points to Gravel Pit Road as the best option, as it would allow for the "future growth of the city."

Highways Minister Don

McMorris, however, maintains that a 2012 ministry review determined that the Gravel Pit Road option would provide no "discernible benefit to motorists" and would increase costs.

"(It) would require all approved interchanges east of Balgonie to be rethought and a new study and consultation process initiated," McMorris explained in a letter to Mryglod dated April 9.

Doug Wakabayashi, spokesman for the Ministry of Highways, said "alternatives to Tower Road have been assessed, and the things they have in common is they significantly increase the cost ... while generating no additional benefit."

Ecological value

Province considers selling nearly 2M acres of Crown land

A new provincial land-management strategy could see about 1.8 million acres of Crown land sold off.

"The new strategy accommodates both public and private ownership, using modern conservation tools to make sure ecological values are maintained," said Environment Minister Ken Cheveldayoff on Monday.

Approximately 1.3 million acres of what the province terms moderately ecologically valuable land in southern Saskatchewan may be offered for sale, with certain restrictions, as part of a Crown conservation easement.

Another 525,000 acres deemed to have lower ecological value may be eligible for sale without restrictions. The province will retain ownership of some 1.7 million acres of land with high ecological value.

The opposition New Democrats argue that the strategy will erode environmental protection by weakening rules governing easements.

"(It) will allow for easements ... to be minimized or eliminated at the minister (of the environment's) discretion," said NDP agriculture critic Cathy Sproule, adding that the policy change was prompted by the government's need for funds.

Cheveldayoff estimates that the land sales could generate $80-$100 million.

The doctor will see you now ... via robot

Dr. Ivar Mendez, head of the University of Saskatchewan's department of surgery, shows how to control the RP-7i Robot to provide health-care services in remote areas. SARAH TAGUIAM/METRO

Saskatchewan's Ministry of Health is pioneering a way to deliver services to remote communities with the help of robots.

A pilot project, recently launched in the First Nations community of Pelican Narrows, uses a robot that allows doctors in Saskatchewan's major centres to connect with patients in rural areas remotely.

"This technology is going to break the barriers of time and distance and save countless lives," said Dr. Ivar Mendez, team lead and head of the University of Saskatchewan's department of surgery. He spoke to reporters on Monday at Regina General Hospital.

With a laptop computer and high-resolution camera, physicians and specialists are able to control the RP-7i Robot.

The consulting doctors' faces appear on the robot's monitor, enabling them to diagnose patients as if they were in the same room.

The robot can perform tasks such as eye examinations and electrocardiograms, among others. Information gathered through it is sent to the doctor's laptop.

"Instead of patients waiting to come to Regina or Saskatoon ... before a diagnosis is made, doctors will see them in real time," Mendez said.

Pelican Narrows patients who need further care have to be transported to a hospital in Flin Flon, Man., a 90-minute drive away.

Due to limited ambulance services, patients sometimes have to travel by taxi or use their own vehicles, according to Dr. Veronica McKinney, director of Northern Medical Services, which has partnered with the province on the project.

The $250,000 project, funded by the province, will be fully operational in June.

"There are way too many lives that have been lost from lack of access," McKinney said, "and we want to make a change."

Human rights crisis. UN official slams Canada's record on First Nations

A UN rapporteur is at a loss to explain how a prosperous and sophisticated country like Canada has come to have on its hands a First Nations human-rights problem that has reached "crisis proportions."

James Anaya's report picks a fight with the federal government on several fronts — education, energy projects on reserves and missing or murdered aboriginal women, to name a few — and is sure to amplify tensions between Canada's First Nations and a federal government they so thoroughly distrust.

"It is difficult to reconcile Canada's well-developed legal framework and general prosperity with the human-rights problems faced by indigenous peoples in Canada that have reached crisis proportions in many respects," writes Anaya, the UN's special rapporteur on indigenous rights.

"Moreover, the relationship between the federal government and indigenous peoples is strained, perhaps even more so than when the previous special rapporteur visited Canada in 2003."

Aboriginal Affairs Minister Bernard Valcourt acknowledged more work needs to be done, but highlighted steps the government has taken to give First Nations access to housing, education and matrimonial rights.

"Our government is proud of the effective and incremental steps taken in partnership with aboriginal communities. We are committed to continuing to work with our partners to make significant progress in improving the lives of aboriginal people in Canada," Valcourt said in a statement.

Lac-Mégantic. Quebec town plans to rebuild the Musi-Café, destroyed in 2013's train disaster, as partly a gathering place, partly a memorial

Time has passed in Lac-Mégantic, but the anxiety has not.

Ten months after the train disaster that killed 47 people in the eastern Quebec town, residents should be gearing up for a bustling tourist season.

Instead, they are still finding their feet after the tragedy and hoping that a construction project begun last week will return some spirit to a town that has known only ghosts since July 6, 2013, when a runaway train loaded with crude oil jumped the tracks and wiped out a swath of the downtown.

The project that is being unveiled Tuesday — the reconstruction of the Musi-Café, a popular local bar — is both emotional and practical.

Practical because the destruction of the rallying point for local revellers, karaoke singers and visiting musical acts has left Lac-Mégantic without a nightlife or place to celebrate moments of joy.

It is charged with emotion because the bar that was located next to the train tracks on the main downtown strip was where about 30 of the 47 victims were enjoying drinks, music and friends when the train flipped, caught fire and exploded.

Just a few things were recovered from the tragedy: a German beer sign, a few beer kegs, a metal drink shaker and a patio umbrella that had been stored in the bar's basement. But the most touching item bar owner Yannick Gagné now has in his possession is the

These items, along with some floor planks and tiles that survived the inferno, will make up part of a memorial that will adorn the new bar when it opens in August or September. It will honour all the townsfolk who died that morning, but especially the many whose last moments were inside the bar.

The new Musi-Café will be just 6,000 square feet of commercial space located at the end of Lac-Mégantic's relocated downtown strip, but it is nevertheless an "overwhelming project," said Marc Bovet, head of Bone Structure, the Quebec firm handling the construction.

"It's not just a building anymore," he said. "It's a spirit. Yannick has been designated, whether he wanted it or not ... as being the leader of rebuilding this community, and it doesn't all come with bricks and mortar."

Boko Haram leader wants prisoner swap

Nigeria. Schoolgirls won't be released until detained fighters are freed: Extremist

A Nigerian Islamic extremist leader says nearly 300 abducted schoolgirls will not be seen again until the government frees his detained fighters.

A new video from Nigeria's Boko Haram terrorist network received Monday purports to show some of the girls and young women chanting Quranic verses in Arabic. The barefoot girls look frightened and sad and sit huddled together wearing grey Muslim veils. Some Christians among them say they have converted to Islam.

It is the first video evidence of the girls and young women since more than 300 were kidnapped from a northeastern school on April 15.

"I swear to almighty Allah you will not see them again until you release our people that you have captured," leader Abubakar Shekau says as he cradles an assault rifle in the video.

It is not known how many suspected Boko Haram members are detained by security forces. Hundreds were killed by soldiers last month when Shekau's fighters stormed the military's main northeastern barracks in Maiduguri city, the birthplace of Boko Haram.

In Chibok, the town from which they were stolen, parents were turning on a generator, hoping they could watch the video and identify their daughters, said one of the town's civil leaders, Pogu Bitrus.

The video shows about 100 of the girls, indicating they may have been broken up into smaller groups as some reports have indicated, Bitrus said.

Fifty-three schoolgirls have escaped by themselves and 276 are missing, police say.

Drag queen. European opinion divided after Austrian victory at music competition

It's the beard that divided a continent. The victory of whiskered drag queen Conchita Wurst in the Eurovision Song Contest had celebrities from Nigella Lawson to Russell Brand posting bearded selfies on the Internet in tribute — and Russian men snapping clean-shaven pictures in protest.

For millions of viewers, the annual Eurovision show is a cheesy music competition renowned for its camp, kitsch and electro beats. But the nation-based contest is also a potent mix of patriotism and politics in bubblegum wrapping.

Wurst's win has exposed a divide between Europe's progressives and conservatives that British tabloid The Sun cheekily described Monday as the "Furred World War."

The statuesque brunette with the soaring voice of a diva and a full dark beard called her first-place finish in Saturday's contest a victory for tolerance and respect.

But Russian Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogozin tweeted that Eurovision had shown the true face of European integration: "a bearded girl." On social media, a variety of Russian men posted shaving-foam selfies with slogans such as "Get shaved, don't be like a woman!"

Pro-Kremlin legislator Olga Batalina — deputy head of the family and maternity issues committee of the lower house of Russia's parliament — said Wurst's victory showed "it's not enough to have a talent and a good voice to win Eurovision; you also need to reject your nature, identity and traditions."

That may sound like a lot of rhetoric over a talent show but Eurovision has always been more than a singing contest. Founded in 1956, the competition pits European nations against one another in pursuit of pop music glory.

But it is more generally loved, and mocked, for its parade of cheesy tunes from quirky performers. The live telecast is watched by some 180 million people and has a particularly strong gay following. It also faces perennial accusations of regional block-voting and geopolitical games.

East Ukraine. Insurgents declare independence

Pro-Moscow insurgents in eastern Ukraine declared independence Monday and sought to join Russia, undermining Ukraine's May 25 presidential election, strengthening the Kremlin's hand and putting pressure on Kyiv to hold talks with the separatists.

Russia signalled it has no intention of subsuming eastern Ukraine the way it annexed Crimea in March. Instead, Moscow is pushing to include eastern regions in negotiations on Ukraine's future — suggesting that Russia prefers a political, not military, solution to its worst standoff with the West since the Cold War.

Acting Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk pledged Monday to hold talks with those in Ukraine's east. But he gave no specifics and did not address the declarations of independence by the Donetsk and Luhansk regions.

The interim government in Kyiv had been hoping the presidential vote would unify the country behind a new, democratically chosen leadership.

Pregnant drivers. Risk of car crashes jumps during 2nd trimester, study finds

Pregnant women who drive appear to be at a significantly higher risk of being in a serious car crash during the second trimester of their pregnancies, a new study suggests.

The researchers, who believe fatigue and sleep disruption are probably responsible, say the increase in risk is similar to what is seen for people who suffer from sleep apnea.

The authors of the study, published in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, said they aren't trying to suggest pregnant women stop driving. In fact, they noted that men of a similar age have even higher rates of accidents than pregnant women do, so the answer is not turning over the keys to one's husband, or male partner.

But pregnant women should be aware of the elevated risk, and ensure that they drive with more caution, Redelmeier said: Stop at every stop sign, use indicator lights to signal turns, wear seat belts at all times.

Prosthetic hands get an update for modern era

DEKA Arm System.

The latest twist on the 1912 invention lets amputees open envelopes, pick up eggs

Modern life is quickly becoming stranger, and for amputees, better than science fiction.

Take the revolutionary new prosthetic limb that looks, and is, completely cutting edge.

The limb is called the DEKA Arm System — and it was developed in New Hampshire by serial inventor/genius Dean Kamen and his team. The thing even has fingernails.

Technology for prosthetic hands hasn't had too many radical advances. Until now, most have been variations on the theme of the 1912 invention of the clasping hook prosthetic.

The DEKA represents a mind-boggling advancement.

Wireless sensors placed under the foot of the user allow them to control six different grips. And that means that a user with one hand can now perform previously difficult tasks like opening an envelope.

The impetus for the invention was a DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) initiative called The Revolutionizing Prosthetics Program. Its goal is "so service members with arm loss may one day have the option of choosing to return to duty.

Fred Downs shows how he can use different grips on the DEKA Arm System to open mail. SCREENGRAB

Additionally, the dexterous hand capabilities developed under the program have already been applied to small robotic systems used in manipulating unexploded ordnance, thus keeping soldiers out of situations that have led to limb loss."

The new system has just been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, meaning that it can be manufactured, sold. It's powerful enough to hold a hand drill, while sensitive enough to allow a user to pick up items as delicate as eggs.

Though a huge improvement from previous prosthetics, the system won't replace the complexity and sensitivity of a human hand. But remember — this is just the first generation. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

ME TARZAN, YOU BREADWINNER

Earlier this month, Fox News hosted a discussion about whether it's problematic for a woman to make more money than her husband. Apparently, segment host Clayton Morris believes female breadwinners are causing serious marital issues among heterosexual couples.

"Isn't there some sort of biological, innate need for men to be the caveman?" he asked a panel of guests.

A genuinely concerned Morris then went on to argue that men should be responsible for "going out and bringing home the dinner" and it is emasculating for a husband to be out-earned by his wife.

I understand that no one has ever accused the talking heads at Fox of being overly feminist, but this news segment seemed particularly chauvinistic, even for them.

It's hard to believe that people are still clinging to these outdated gender roles. Hosting a televised debate about how "Alpha women" are undermining their husbands and contributing to some sort of imagined societal breakdown seems like something that might have happened in 1954, not 2014.

Are we really supposed to believe that modern men are so fragile and insecure? A 2013 Pew Research Study found that almost a quarter of married mothers in the U.S. earn more than their husbands, which means there must be a lot of bruised male egos out there, according to Morris's caveman logic.

In my opinion, women who are the primary income earners in a relationship are about as "problematic" as husbands who change diapers or do the laundry.

Children are incredibly draining on all of your resources — time, energy and definitely money — and nobody should be criticized for contributing to the family finances.

A man's self-esteem might be closely linked to his career, but so is mine.

The women I know are far more likely to find self-fulfillment by succeeding in a lucrative career than perfecting their ability to bake a cake or be a "good wife" in the traditional, Fox News kind of way.

Raising a family is a joint effort. Married partners are playing on the same team, and men and women shouldn't be competing over their paycheques.

There are so many different types of households, and expecting the partner with the most testosterone to fulfil the role of "provider" at all times is a completely archaic notion.

Female breadwinners aren't an issue; sexist news anchors who broadcast their patriarchal opinions and disapprove of women with high-paying jobs are the real problem in this scenario.

Men should be proud to be coupled up with a successful partner, not worrying about how their wife's salary impacts their own masculine identity.

WE ACT: CANADA DOES GOOD

Stories from hospital hallways

Each month, we profile a Canadian who's up to a whole lot of good. Here's one we'd like you to meet:

Who: Jackie Kinder, community volunteer with Childcan, London, Ont.

What: Fundraising and organizing community events to help support the families of young people diagnosed with cancer.

Why: To provide the families with the financial and community support they need to focus on their children.

Jackie met 14-year-old Stephanie Simmons, a three-time brain-tumour survivor, when she began volunteering with Childcan. "She's my hero," says Jackie. "Knowing what she went through and knowing that through it all she was so brave, so concerned with helping other children, that's what hooked me." Since then, Jackie has taken a leading role fundraising for Childcan, participating in the Inside Ride cycling event and the National Day of Action for kids with cancer at the CN Tower.

What motivated you to get involved with families dealing with childhood cancer?

"You don't leave a child alone in the hospital — you're there for the long haul, and it's incredibly demanding on the family. When families come into the hospital, Childcan has people there right away to offer support. We bring them into the Childcan family, and I fundraise to help with gas, cafeteria vouchers, parking and credit-card bills. The financial hardships are major — but help is always there."

Jackie Kinder, right, with Stephanie Simmons, a three-time brain tumour survivor. CONTRIBUTED

You've spent your life working with young people, first as a teacher and now as a volunteer. What advice do you have for them?

"Take the time to find and develop your passion for a cause. I've met some wonderful volunteers, and they are all happier for the work they do. They've learned that happiness doesn't mean all that you own — it's about giving back to other people. It's something I learned from Stephanie: it's the feeling you get doing something worthwhile for other people in your community that keeps us going."

METRO AUGMENTED REALITY

SEE THE NEWS COME ALIVE...

In this issue, you can find AR enhancements on page 12 in Scene and page 18 in Sports.

To see pages from Metro spring to life, simply download or update the Metro News app available from your device's app store and follow these three easy steps:

1. Open the Metro News app on your smartphone or tablet device. Click the AR icon in the top right corner.
2. Hold your device over any image that has the AR logo near it. Make sure you wait for the green scanning bar to read the image!
3. Voilà! You should see the AR in action — like a video, slide show or mobile content experience. You can even move your phone away from the page and interact with the content directly on your device.

Every year, the city of Hamburg celebrates its harbour's birthday with a massive bash along the Elbe. Drawing more than one million people, the harbour party features vessel parades, something called a tugboat ballet and the much more humble-sounding dragon boat race.

But this is a party, after all. And what party is complete without music? Enter the enormous cruise ship MSC Magnifica — launched from this very harbour in 2010 — and its bone-rattling, horn-fired rendition of Seven Nation Army.

St. Vincent wants all of your mind this summer

Indie musical landscape.

Singer Annie Clark comes into her own, creating a live show unlike any other St. Vincent concert

Metro World News in Boston

Just because St. Vincent's summer itinerary is packed with more than a dozen festival dates on four continents doesn't mean that Annie Clark is scaling back the theatrics of the St. Vincent concert experience.

The singer and guitarist will still force herself down a giant set of pink stairs, writhe around against a storm of strobe lights and eventually command the procession, purposefully poised like a cross, from an oversized pink throne.

"We've worked really hard on this strange fever dream of a show, bringing it to life," says Clark, "so it's important that people get the whole experience, even if it's at a festival."

That "strange fever dream of a show," along with the self-titled fifth St. Vincent album, may be the most definitive statement from any artist this year. From Clark's fat guitar leads to her strange and simple lyrics — any of which can Wbe pulled out to illustrate what St. Vincent is all about in 2014 — it feels like the artist has truly discovered her identity.

"I'll always be evolving and be restless and wanting to move violently into the future," says Clark of arriving at something that could be considered iconic, "but I was reading Miles Davis's autobiography and it was saying how the hardest thing about being a musician is to sound like yourself. I can hear one note of Miles or Coltrane and know that it's them and it's the world that they have painstakingly created to be unmistakable. I just thought that this record for me was something where I had successfully created a landscape that was my own."

This landscape includes Clark's stylized lavender/gray old lady hair, of which she says: "Everyone is really obsessed with being young and youth culture and this sort of erroneous idea that things are the best when you are young, and I am young, but I wanted to see what it would look like to go in the opposite direction." And this landscape also includes conscious choreography in the live show, the likes of which hasn't been seen on a St. Vincent tour before. Clark says she was inspired by doing an album and tour with David Byrne, whose live show included an eight-piece brass band moving around the stage and creating what Clark says was "this whole other level of drama and whimsy and symbolic subconscious meaning that the audience can pick up on."

"I wanted to create a real experience for people, especially in this day and age where we are kind of obsessed with capturing moments at the expense of living them," she says. "I wanted to encourage people as much as possible to be present and be so engrossed in the show that they are not tempted to check their text messages."

SNL musical guest

St. Vincent will be the musical guest on the season finale of Saturday Night Live this weekend.

DVD review

Her

Director. Spike Jonze

Most sci-fi films make a human/machine love connection seem perverse or at least far out, yet Spike Jonze's Her treats it as a mild novelty.

Set about five years in the future in techno-fabulous L.A., it's nominally a simple sci-fi romance of a man, played by Joaquin Phoenix, falling in love with a machine, voiced by Scarlett Johansson.

There's much more going on than this, of course, as you'd expect from the director who brought us the layered head-spinners Being John Malkovich, Adaptation and Where the Wild Things Are. The film's subliminal message is that the human touch is in danger of being replaced with an "on" switch.

Phoenix and Johansson make for a completely convincing couple. Jonze sidesteps sniggers, shivers and convention, putting in plot twists that are at once shocking and completely logical.

He's really interested in the difficulty of making and maintaining emotional and intellectual ties, no matter whether the heart is made of flesh or silicon.

Extras include several making-of featurettes.

The drama behind the scenes on beleaguered NBC sitcom Community was always nearly as compelling as the jokes onscreen. Perennially low-rated, Community faced cancellation every year for its five seasons. Now the scrappy little show that could finally can't: NBC gave it the axe last week.

The show's obsessive fans won't give up at such a minor setback, however. Fans have already begun petitioning production company Sony to shop Community to other networks.

But the plan won't work unless the most important fan of all, creator/showrunner Dan Harmon, is onboard, and he sounds decidedly unenthused.

"[W]hen Sony called me on Friday with the news, there was brief discussion at the end of the call about the concept of the show living elsewhere, and I was definitely in the 'eh' column," he writes on his blog.

"For a million reasons, some selfish, some creative, one logistic, five sexual, three racist (in a good way) and, oddly, nine isometric."

Ben's gambling Garners negative attention from Jennifer

Ben Affleck is developing quite a reputation in Las Vegas, with several casinos accusing the Argo star of card counting — and his wife, Jennifer Garner, is less than thrilled, according to Star magazine. "Jen demanded to go to Vegas with Ben because she doesn't trust him, and he felt like he had no choice but to take her," a source says of the couple's visit last month that didn't end well for Affleck. "But after their dinners there each night, she would go back to their suite while Ben would stay out all night playing cards, betting thousands of dollars at a time. It makes Jen so mad, but once Ben starts gambling he can't stop." Until the casino intervenes, at least. And the source claims that when Affleck was busted by the Hard Rock Hotel & Casino, Garner was by his side: "She looked totally bored and annoyed," the source says.

Solange Knowles GETTY IMAGES

She may be young, but she's ready to throw down

In an exclusive video from TMZ.com, you can see Beyoncé's sister, Solange Knowles, viciously attacking Jay-Z in an elevator after the Met Ball. A man who appears to be Jay-Z's bodyguard holds the swinging and kicking Knowles back, but she makes contact with the Hova at least three times. For her part, Beyoncé just kind of stands there.

The video was taken by a surveillance camera in the elevator of the Standard Hotel after the big gala on May 4th during an after party. As TMZ.com points out, the bodyguard stops the elevator at one point, probably in hopes of keeping this private affair private.

Too late.

Looks can be deceiving — even when it comes to boredom

Why do we get bored?
One professor weighs in

KIERON MONKS

Metro World News in New York City

You might think it's your fault you're dozing off in a classroom or office, but that's not always the case.

There are clear categories of boredom triggered by one's environment, says pioneering researcher Dr. Thomas Goetz from the University of Konstanz in Germany (see sidebar).

What is the most common misconception about boredom?

It's important to recognize the different types, and clearly define the differences.

You say apathetic boredom is the worst — how bad can it get?

The problem is that it makes every experience negative and the potential for arousal is low. You can't do anything against this state and it can become a big problem related to depression.

What puts us at risk?

Some people tend to a specific state but only to a small degree; each experience is based on situations. It's important that people recognize the forms. Often the problem is a lack of freedom, such as at school. Teachers should be aware and try to find individualized methods that give students choice.

Is there a risk that teaching

Researchers believe there are five types of boredom. ISTOCK boredom could cause more boredom?

There is an argument from anxiety research that awareness increases the problem, but in this case it is about knowing and realizing, and this goes hand in hand with resolving it.

What follow-up research is needed?

We didn't measure the effects. We need diagnostic instruments to show the experiences of boredom.

Types of boredom

Here are the various categories.

- Indifferent boredom. A relaxing, possibly positive type — “a general indifference to, and withdrawal from, the external world.”

- Calibrating boredom. Wandering thoughts — “general openness to behaviours aimed at changing the situation.”

- Searching boredom. “Actively seeking out specific ways of minimizing feelings of boredom.”

- Reactant boredom. Causes sufferers “to leave the boredom-inducing situation and avoid those responsible for this situation (e.g., teachers).”

- Apathetic boredom. Impossible to break from this mode — “dangerous, similar to depression.”

Jesus on toast, Elvis on potato chips?

There are well-publicized examples of people reportedly discovering famous faces on everyday objects, from the visage of Jesus on a sandwich to the Elvis Presley on a potato chip.

Toronto researchers have found that “face pareidolia,” where onlookers report seeing well-known countenances in bread, smoke or rock formations, is normal and based on how the brain interprets and makes sense of visual stimuli.

“Our findings suggest that it's common for people to see non-existent features because human brains are uniquely wired to recognize faces,” said lead researcher Kang Lee, a developmental neuroscientist at the University of Toronto, of the study published in the journal Cortex. “So that even when there's only a slight suggestion of facial features, the brain automatically interprets it as a face.”

To conduct the study, researchers had 20 participants, aged 18 to 25, look at a series of “noise-making” images, so-called because they contain no discernible shapes. However, participants were deliberately misled, Lee said.

In one experiment, subjects were told that half the images contained faces. For a second test, they were told half the images contained a letter. In about 35 per cent of cases, those viewing the images reported seeing a face or a letter where none existed. Turns out their brains, at least, do appear to be “seeing” something recognizable.

Using a technique called functional MRI to perform brain scans, researchers found certain areas involved in either face or letter recognition “lit up” when participants discerned what they thought was a face. That didn't occur only in the visual cortex at the back of the brain, but also in a particular area of the frontal cortex that's been implicated in face-processing.

Typically it was thought that when visual information is perceived by the retina, it is projected to the visual cortex at the back of the brain, then sent forward to the frontal lobe to be interpreted, he said.

“Now our evidence is suggesting that the information is actually going backwards, so the frontal brain sends it back to the visual cortex to heighten

Mary had a little lamb

NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert
DHN, RNCPT
myfriendinfood.com

Mary had a little lamb, because the meat is moist and rich and satisfying, and a little lamb is all you need. Bahaha. OK, that's enough.

Delicious lamb is raised in Canada and is generally a local, grass-fed food.

That said, if you don't check the label, you are more than likely enjoying an imported product from New Zealand.

Lamb leg or rump can be a little higher in fat and calories but it has all of the benefits of other animal meats like protein, B12 and zinc.

Lamb chops are generally a quick-cooking, leaner option and a nice change.

There is a slightly gamey flavour to lamb that can be an acquired taste but chops are generally milder. For newbies, sweet flavours like mint or raspberry are great compliments to minimize the grassiness.

The trick for cooking lamb chops is to be sure to preheat the grill to a very high heat but to only cook each chop for three or four minutes per side.

The protein is delicate and the meat is thin, so chops don't need much attention to be tender and delicious.

Let the chops rest for a few minutes before serving so that all of the juices remain within the meat.

Going green on the greens

Environment. More golf courses are embracing initiatives for wildlife and habitat management

BRIAN KENDALL
For Metro

Once ranked alongside the razing of rainforests as an ecologically hostile activity, golf has embraced the green movement with the zeal of the converted.

A total of 65 Canadian courses are fully certified members of the Audubon

Co-operative Sanctuary System, with hundreds more working towards certification. The international program sets targets in a variety of areas, from wildlife and habitat management to water conservation and quality control.

And then there are the courses that go even further by making their green initiatives all part of the fun and attraction of playing them.

Dean Piller, the superintendent at Victoria's Cordova Bay Golf Course, conducts birdwatching tours twice a year, having worked hard to attract an astonishing variety of land and sea birds to the property.

Nesting boxes were strategically placed around the course, as well as feeders to help birds survive the winter at a course open year-round.

From about 60 different bird species routinely seen at Cordova Bay several years ago, the count has now risen to more than 70, from cormorants and blue herons to barn swallows and bald eagles.

At Stewart Creek Golf and Country Club, a Rocky Mountain layout in the environmentally sensitive Bow Valley near Canmore, Alta., wildlife corridors are incorporated into the course routing, as well as native grasses to provide forage for migrating animals. Golfers thrill to watching bear, elk and other wildlife travel through the course.

But perhaps the most original initiative is found at Manitoba's Clear Lake Golf Course in Riding Mountain National Park, where there is often a strong, and environmentally beneficial, whiff of french fries in the air.

The smell is expelled by the exhausts of six maintenance machines rigged to run on used cooking oil gathered from nearby restaurants. As much as 10,000 litres of an otherwise useless waste product is recycled this way each year.

"The only downside is that golfers are reporting a constant craving for fast food," superintendent Greg Holden said jokingly.

Make those putts count

It's almost impossible to overstate the importance of making short putts. Consistently missing three- and four-footers will quickly destroy your confidence and ruin your scores.

No less an authority than Annika Sorenstam believes that boldness is the key.

"Be in charge," she said. "A great way to practise making short putts is to place a tee at the back of the cup and hit toward it with conviction. Make a decision and boom — drop the putt."

Top instructor David Leadbetter suggests choking down on the putter for better control. Grip the club lightly, make a short stroke and accelerate through impact.

Just as crucial is resisting the temptation to look up immediately after you have hit the ball. This will ensure that you complete your stroke and keep the putter's face square to the target line.

"Wait for the rattle when the ball drops into the cup," Sam Snead liked to say. "It's the sweetest sound in golf."

A wee bit of history

For Metro

Like everyone who loves the game, you have fantasized about a golf vacation in Scotland and you are determined to make it happen this year.

With more than 550 courses, golf's birthplace offers an overwhelming choice of possible itineraries. But nowhere is Scotland richer in famous links than along its northeast coast, where the roster includes Muirfield, Cruden Bay, Royal Dornoch, Carnoustie, Trump International and the Old Course in St. Andrews. All belong on any ranking of the world's top 100 courses.

Rent a car and happily spend a week or two golfing your way along the rugged coastline. But if you are pressed for time or don't want to do so much driving, then consider basing yourself in Edinburgh, a city of almost unrivalled Georgian splendor, and make daily golf treks to the adjoining district of East Lothian. Marketed as Scotland's Golf Coast, this stretch of the Firth of Forth coastline offers 22 courses.

Edinburgh is also just two hours by train or car from St.

Andrews, the cradle of the game and a town as recognizably Scottish as the kilt and sporran. Once settled in at the Old Course Hotel or Rucksacks Hotel in St. Andrews, enter your name in the ballot to play the Old Course, the experience of a lifetime.

Tips. Learn to think like a pro

You have hit hundreds of balls at the range and your swing is looking good. Now it's time to take your game to the next level by booking an on-course playing lesson with a teaching pro.

"Playing lessons are a great way for golfers to learn to think strategically on the course," said Ted Stonehouse, the head professional at Clovelly Golf Course in St. John's, N.L. "Golf is like chess. To score well, you have to think at least two moves ahead."

On which side of the tee box should you set up? What's the optimum target line? Should you try to make a shot where trouble looms, or is the smart play a lay-up?

"A pro can help you develop a master plan suited to your talent level," Stonehouse said. "Suppose a particular hole at your home course has been giving you trouble. Well, let's look at it in a new way. Let's try a different club or a slightly easier route to the green."

A playing lesson also offers a golden opportunity to watch and emulate a professional's approach to the game. Study the pro's pre-shot routine, how they read putts, and the tempo of their swing.

"Some people are a little intimidated at first when they play with a pro," Stonehouse said. "But just relax and enjoy the experience. And remember that you're doing us a favour by getting us out of the pro shop." BRIAN KENDALL

Decision time is upon Redblacks' Desjardins

CFL draft. Ottawa GM mum on who he has pegged with No. 1 pick

While Ottawa Redblacks general manager Marcel Desjardins has entertained some offers for his first overall pick in the CFL draft, he says there's a "relatively good chance" he'll make the pick Tuesday night.

"There has been some (interest) but not a whole lot," Desjardins said Monday.

Desjardins says he knows who he wants to take first overall but is keeping it to himself. One player the Redblacks won't use the top pick on is McGill tackle Laurent Duvernay-Tardif, the top-ranked CIS prospect for the draft who was selected in the sixth round of the NFL draft Saturday by the Kansas City Chiefs.

"As much as he would've been a guy that we probably

Laval centre Pierre Lavertu is thought to be atop the Ottawa Redblacks' draft board going into Tuesday's draft. LUCAS OLENIUK/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE would've selected, now that he has a commitment from an NFL team there's no reason for us to go in that direction," Desjardins said.

The popular sentiment is if Desjardins keeps the No. 1 pick, he'll use it on Laval centre Pierre Lavertu. The six-foot-three, 300-pound Lavertu finished third in the CFL scouting bureau's season-ending top-15 rankings, and while he might not have the most upside and potential, Lavertu is generally regarded as one of the most pro-ready prospects in the draft.

Drafting Lavertu first overall would address a need for Ottawa after the off-season retirement of veteran Marwan Hage, whom the Redblacks selected in the CFL expansion draft in December from the Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

"Offensive line is a need, no doubt," Desjardins said. "But that doesn't necessarily mean 100 per cent that's what we'll do."

"There's a good chance but everybody talks about a certain number of guys, whether it's those two or three other top prospects. Just because they're being written about and spoken about that doesn't mean we have them graded the same way."

For the first time ever, the CFL draft will be held at night, with the first round broadcast live on TSN. That could give teams more time to talk trade with Desjardins, although the Redblacks GM isn't anticipating a lot of last-minute offers.

"Maybe a little bit but I wouldn't think that dynamic would change," he said.

Premier League

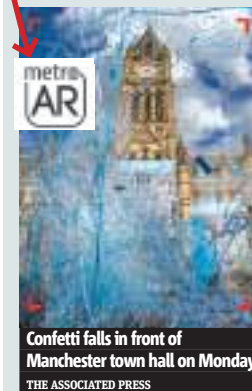

City still playing in United's shadow

Manchester City has deposed its neighbour as Premier League champions for the second time in three years, but is not close to usurping United's global supremacy — both as a football club and as a brand.

Even Premier League officials marked the end of the season by assuring United's owners of the team's enduring power.

"They are the world's largest football club in my view with huge resources, with huge determination and a fantastic fan base," league chief executive Richard Scudamore told Sky Sports television. "Of course their time will come again."

Stamps decry Price's tweets

The Calgary Stampeders say they are "outraged by the offensive comments" posted on wide receiver Maurice Price's Twitter account that appeared to disparage the sexual orientation of NFL draft pick Michael Sam.

"The comments are repugnant and in no way reflect the organization's views or values," the CFL club said in a statement late Monday. "The matter will now be dealt with internally."

A tweet removed from @MauricePrice17 within an hour of its initial posting said "My faith won't allow me to ACCEPT what took place over the weekend. Sorry. NOT sorry! #AdamandEve #NotAdamandAdam."

"And it's highly disturbing that under the current constitution individuals have been fined for verbalizing their thoughts," another tweet read.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

You have started many new things in recent weeks but you will soon have to choose which one or two projects you are going to focus on. There's no point trying to do it all.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

With the Sun moving through your birth sign you are eager to start something new. Don't wait for Lady Luck to drop opportunities into your lap — get out there and create them yourself.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Everyone has daydreams but the power of your imaginings could lead you in some unusual directions. Try to keep a grip on reality today, otherwise your mind could float away!

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Work hard but leave yourself time for fun too. Friends will come by when you least expect it and you should be ready to drop what you are doing and make them feel welcome.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You will be extraordinarily assertive on the work front, but you could also annoy people who think you are trying to usurp their position. You must stay on good terms with those in positions of power.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You will find that a number of questions you have been asking over the past few weeks will answer themselves. Whether or not the answers are to your liking, at least you will know what it all means.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Fears you thought had been put behind you will return in unexpected ways. However, if you face up to those fears and deal with them bravely the planets indicate this will be the very last time they bother you.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The next few days are mainly about relationships. Challenges must be dealt with and certain people must be told in no uncertain terms that you are the boss. Compromise is possible, but only after you establish your authority.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

If you need to make changes in your working environment now is the time. Some of your colleagues won't like what you do but that's too bad. Either they fit in with your plans or they move out.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

This is one of the best times of the year for you and you really should be making the most of it. Most things are possible, so set your sights high and make greatness your goal.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

A difference of opinion with a friend or family member could get out of hand, so promise yourself no matter what is said you won't overreact. Soon all will be forgotten.

Pisces

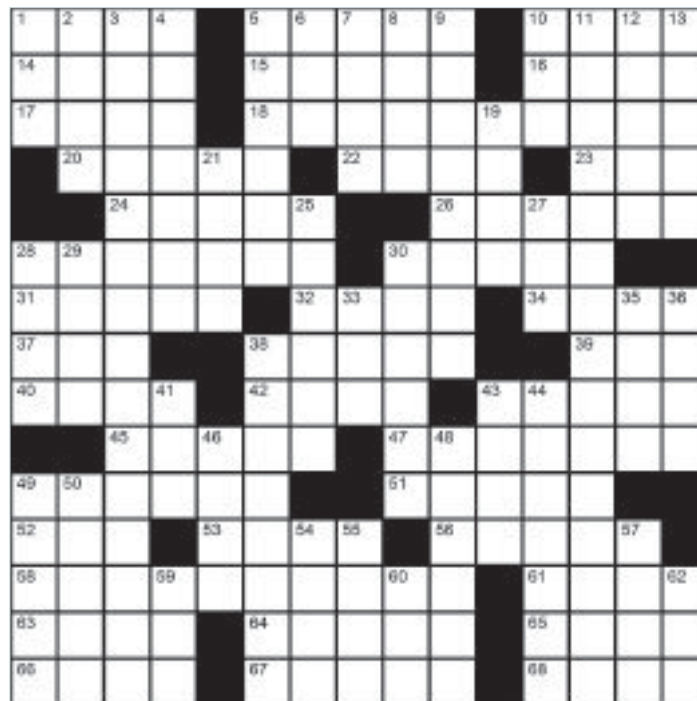

Feb. 20 - March 20

Travel is on the cards but so are hold-ups and unexpected diversions. Wherever you end up you'll have a lot of fun, so don't stay home — get out into the world. SALLY BROMPTON
